Cut Flowers Die

There is something beautiful about cut flowers. For a little while, they still look alive. Their color remains, and their shape stays intact. But everyone knows the same thing about cut flowers, they are dying. Why? Because they have been separated from their source of life.

Isn't that a fitting picture of morality without God? A person can cut off the flower and still admire it for a while. And in the same way, a society can cut itself off from God and still hold on to certain moral values for a time. People may continue speaking about honesty, kindness, fidelity, justice, compassion, and decency. Outwardly, the flower is still there, but cut flowers die.

If morality is the flower, then God is the root. If righteous living is the fruit, then God's word is the seed. Once people sever morality from the authority of Scripture, they may preserve the appearance of goodness for a generation or two, but it will not last! Morality can't survive long when it's disconnected from the One who defines what is good.

God Is The Source Of What Is Good

The Bible doesn't present morality as something man invented. Goodness doesn't begin with culture, education, public opinion, or human consensus. It begins with God!

Psalm 119:68 says, "You are good and do good; teach me Your statutes." Good is rooted in God's character. He is the standard.

James 1:17 says, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and comes down from the Father of lights." If every truly good gift comes from above, then moral truth does too. Man doesn't discover morality by looking within himself. He learns morality by reading the Word of God. Micah 6:8 says, "He has shown you, O man, what is good." Micah doesn't say man figured out what is good, he says God has shown him. Moral truth is revealed truth!

Morality Without God Cannot Stand

Many people want the flower without the root. They want the benefits of biblical morality without submission to biblical authority. They want strong families without God's design for the family. They want justice without acknowledging the Judge of all the earth. They want dignity, value, love, sacrifice, and truth, but they don't want the God who gives those words meaning.

But once morality is detached from God, it becomes unstable. Why is honesty good? Why is murder wrong? Why is sexual purity honorable? Why should someone sacrifice for another person? Why should the strong protect the weak? Why should truth matter more than desire?

If there's no God, then those questions have no fixed answer. Morality becomes preference, tradition, social convenience, or majority opinion. And what one generation calls virtue, the next generation may call oppression. What one culture honors, another may reject. Without God, morality becomes negotiable!

Judges 21:25 describes the chaos that results when God's rule is cast aside, "Everyone did what was right in his own eyes." That is the natural end of morality cut loose from God. When man becomes his own standard, he doesn't gain freedom, he finds confusion.

Proverbs 14:12, "There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death." What "seems right" isn't enough. Human instinct isn't a trustworthy moral compass. Feelings change, cultures drift, and hearts deceive.

Jeremiah 10:23 says, "O Lord, I know the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man who walks to direct his own steps." Man can't author a lasting morality because he was never meant to be his own god.

Cut flowers are beautiful, but eventually they wither and die. Moral decency without God is doomed to fail.

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control. Against such there is no law.
